NO IMPROVEMENT ON TOLL ROADS

Commissioner Bigelow will not improve Roads on which Toll is Charged and Such Roads will have to be Acquired by State.

The Chambersburg pike, the Littlestown pike and the pike from New Oxford to York will cease to exist as toll roads before any improvements are made to them, according to a general ruling made by Highway Commissioner Bigelow.

Mr. Bigelow will insist that owners of toll road franchises or rights connecting with sections of public roads suggested for improvement be surrendered to the Commonwealth before any construction work is done. The commissioner laid down this principle when he gave notice to a delegation from Bucks county that roads would not be fixed up where the improvements were going to result in increased traffic and consequent growth in income for toll roads.

The commissioner has been looking into the state of the toll roads about the state, using the data prepared for the legislature and the engineers who are making surveys for improvement of roads under the $50,000,000 loan are examining the condition of the comparatively few highways where gates exist. It is believed that through pressure of public opinion franchises will be surrendered and rights dedicated to the state in many sections and where it is necessary the commissioner can invoke the drastic provisions of the Sprout main highway law.

The surveys of highways which are to be taken over under the Sprout act have been pushed at a remarkable rate and the data in hand already will go far toward enabling the state to make a rapid start on work in the spring.

ROAD TO WAYNESBORO

Waynesboro's Board of Trade wants the state highway department to build the proposed state road from Waynesboro to Gettysburg before 1913, and the executive committee of the organization at its regular monthly meeting instructed Secretary Dierdorf to take the matter up in the hope of having the road built during the coming summer.

The surveys were made from Gettysburg during the past fall from Gettysburg to Waynesboro and the state road leading southward from Waynesboro to the Maryland line.

WARMER WEATHER SOON

Snow and sleet and cold weather throughout the entire country will usher in this week, according to the special forecast issued by the Weather Bureau. A general reaction to warmer and more pleasant conditions will mark the close of the week. The forecast continues:

"The first general storm of the week to cross the country is now central over Utah, whence it will move eastward and cross the great central valleys Monday night or Tuesday and the Eastern states Tuesday or Tuesday night it will be preceded by moderating temperatures and rain and snow in Southern and snow in Northern districts, and be followed by a widespread change to colder weather. This cold wave will appear in the Northwest Monday night.

"The next general disturbance to cross the country will appear on the Pacific Coast Wednesday, cross the Middle West about Friday and the Eastern states at the close of the week; it will be attended by widespread cloudiness and precipitation and a general reaction to warmer weather.

"Stormy weather will prevail the coming week over the North Atlantic steamship routes, the British Isles and Europe."

LARGELY ATTENDED

The service in the College Lutheran church on Sunday evening was largely attended, practically every seat being taken except a few at the front of the church and some in the gallery. It was the first church service held there by St. James Rev. J. B. Baker preached on "Dungeons in the Air" and the St. James choir had charge of the music. The Christian Endeavor service was also largely attended. At the morning service in the College church Miss Lillian Ring sang "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say."

WHEAT NOT BADLY HURT

Reports received at the State Department of Agriculture from wheat growing sections of the state indicate that the snow fall during last week was so general that the cold wave caused comparatively little damage to the winter wheat. In the southern and central counties the fall was from two to four inches.

Practically all the wheat sown in Pennsylvania is winter wheat and last year 1,289,000 acres were planted, the yield being 17,400,000 bushels in round numbers. The acreage sown this season will probably not run as high as last owing to the wet weather which occurred about the time farmers generally sow wheat. In a number of counties the sowing was so late that the wheat has not had a chance to come up.

GOMING—MR. PAUL GILMORE

"The Mummy and the Humming Bird" which comes to the Wizard Theatre Thursday evening is a society drama in four acts and has proved one of the greatest successes in years. Mr. Paul Gilmore who plays Lord Lumley is one of the best leading men on the American stage. He has supported some of the most well known stars. He will have the support of a company of standard merit including Miss Kathryn Hutchison. Nothing will be left undone to make this attraction the best of the season.

General Suydam was accompanied by Commander Rhodes, of Post 88, Harrisburg.

The Eagle Hotel has been chosen as headquarters for the officers, and General Suydam on Saturday selected rooms for them. The matter of badges and other minor details were gone over with local parties and after a stay of a little over two hours, he left on his return to Philadelphia.

This is the condition upon which the attraction comes here. The amount involved is between $400 and $450. Of this amount $250 has been subscribed by the Eagle Hotel and Hotel Gettysburg.

FIRE AT HANOVER

A coal oil stove was the cause of a serious loss to D. D. Krug and Son, Hanover on Saturday morning, when the frame stable on their wood and coal yard burned to the ground, the contents being either destroyed or irreparably damaged. Whether the stove exploded or in some other manner set fire to its surroundings, or whether the fire originated from another source is a matter of conjecture, but the consensus of opinion is that the stove was the cause. It was placed in the barn to furnish heat for potatoes stored there. There is a small insurance on the building. The blaze was first seen by D. A. Ballinger. Owing to the high wind the building was a mass of flames before the firemen could get any streams on the fire and the building was entirely destroyed with the exception of the side walls. In the building were a carload of straw, a half carload of cement and 200 bushels of potatoes.

INSANE WOMAN POISONS MANY

Deserted by Husband She Tries to Kill Household.

HERSELF AND 3 OTHERS DEAD

One Is Dying and Four Are Seriously Ill In Hospital—All Were Stricken at Night.

Philadelphia, Jan. 8.—Gone mad because her husband deserted her, Mrs. Bridget Flanagan, a boarding house keeper, at 1323 North Twenty-fourth street, killed herself and three others in an attempt to poison her entire household.

A fifth victim is so ill that she will die, and four others are suffering from the drug.

The discovery of the woman's deed was made by Margaret Curran, who herself was taken ill, though slightly, and who passed the night administering to her mother, Mrs. Hannah Curran, who is dying at the Women's hospital.

She rushed to the home of a neighbor, who in turn telephoned the police. The latter, on arrival at the Flanagan home, found four bodies in Mrs. Flanagan's room on the first floor.

The landlady herself was found sitting in a chair. On the bed near her were the bodies of Catherine Murray, Anna Flanagan and Joseph Flanagan.

The clue to the manner in which the victims met their deaths was furnished by the infant. The poison, believed to have been cyanide of potassium, was placed in the milk and tea.

The baby drank nothing but milk, and his death is significant in the case for this reason. The others found dead all drank of the tea at supper.

The dead are:
Mrs. Bridget Flanagan, thirty-seven years old.

Miss Catherine Murray, eighteen years old.
Anna Flanagan, ten years old.
Joseph Flanagan, sixteen months of age.

Those ill are:
Mrs. Hannah Curran.
Marguerite Curran, eighteen years old.

Philip Curran, seventeen years old.
Thomas Gallagher, fourteen years of age.

Dennis McPadden, aged twenty-nine years.

After an investigation the police came to the conclusion that Mrs. Flanagan became deranged over the separation from her husband, and that while in a fit of mental aberration she poisoned the household.

Flanagan has not been home for a week. At that time he returned and told his wife that he had lost his job with the Baldwin Locomotive works. As Flanagan had been employed there for twenty-five years, Mrs. Flanagan was suspicious of this statement.

The wife visited the works and learned that her husband was still employed there and that there was not even a possibility of his discharge, the police say.

She returned home, and each day that her husband stayed away became more morose and despondent. She invited her sister, Mrs. Hannah Curran, to come and live with her to relieve the tedium of her loneliness. The entire Curran family went to live with Mrs. Flanagan.

Mrs. Flanagan prepared the supper as usual. The boarders had roast pork, and drank the usual tea and milk with their meal. Nobody seemed to be at all affected until after the household had retired.

During the night Marguerite experienced a slight nausea, and when she awakened was surprised to find her mother groaning in pain. The girl, forgetful of her own illness, started to administer relief to her mother, and while she was thus engaged Philip staggered into his mother's room and said that he and Thomas were very sick.

Thinking that the illness might have resulted from the pork, Marguerite did not trouble to inform Mrs. Flanagan of her relatives' plight, which postponed the discovery of the deaths.

The girl was up all night, and she finally managed by the use of household remedies to give her relatives, with the exception of her mother, the necessary relief. So alarmed did the girl become at her mother's illness that she went downstairs to inform her aunt of her mother's serious condition and to summon assistance.

One glance at her aunt in the chair satisfied the girl of the worst.

"My God, she's dead!" the girl yelled, and then hastened to the home of Mrs. Bertha Hoff. It was the latter who telephoned the police and also the hospital authorities.

Morgan's Yacht Nearly Wrecked.
Norfolk, Va., Jan. 8.—With her cabin, a portion of her hull and both anchors gone, the steam yacht Corsair, owned by J. P. Morgan, is lying at anchor off Asatague Island, near Tom Shoals, with the revenue cutter Onondaga standing by. The Corsair had a terrible experience in the storm on Friday night and came near foundering in the gale. Lifesavers sighted the yacht in distress and went to her assistance. The names of those on board could not be learned, but it was reported that they were taken off by lifesavers, who gave them clothing and food and a place to sleep.

RICHESON TO MAKE PLEA OF GUILTY

Death Sentence to be Imposed on Confessed Murderer.

Boston, Jan. 8. — A self-confessed murderer, Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson will be brought into the courtroom and will be given opportunity to plead before Judge Sanderson in the superior court to having killed Avis Linnell, his young sweetheart, by poison.

If Judge Sanderson accepts the first degree plea, a sentence of death will be imposed, and then the attorneys for the defense will start their battle to have Governor Foss and his council reduce the sentence to life imprisonment, basing their contention upon his self-inflicted mutilation and on his confession, which saved the government a long and expensive trial.

If the plea is not accepted by Judge Sanderson the trial will commence on Jan. 15 as originally planned, and the confession, signed by Richeson, and turned over to the district attorney, will be used as evidence against the young minister.

Sensational in the extreme was the voluntary confession of the clergyman, wrung from him in his cell by the agony of a tortured mind. He wrote, addressing his counsel:

"Gentlemen—Deeply penitent for my sin, and earnestly desiring, as far as in my power lies, to make atonement, I hereby confess that I am guilty of the offense of which I stand indicted.

"I am moved to this course by no inducement of self-interest or leniency. Heinous as is my crime, God has not wholly abandoned me, and my conscience and manhood, however depraved and blighted, will not admit of my still further wrongdoing by a public trial for whose pure young life I have destroyed. Under the lashings of remorse, I have suffered and am suffering the tortures of the damned. In this I find a measure of comfort. In my mental anguish I recognize that there is still, by the mercy of the master, some remnant of the divine spark of goodness still lingering within me. I could wish to live only because within some prison's walls I might, in some small measure, redeem my sinful past, help some other despairing soul, and, at last, find favor with my God.

"You are instructed to deliver this to the district attorney or to the judge of the court.

The indictment to which Richeson's confession referred charges that he "feloniously, wilfully and of his malice aforethought" gave Miss Avis Linnell a certain quantity of cyanide of potassium with deadly intent, and that, "because of her death from it on Oct. 14 he is guilty of murder in the first degree."

GOUGES OUT EYES OF AGED PAIR

Man, 80 Years Old, and Wife,
72, Murdered.

WERE DEAD FIVE DAYS

No Motive Can Be Found For Killing of Victims Discovered Slain in New York Flat.

New York, Jan. 8.—Isaac Futterman, eighty years old, and Rebecca, his wife, seventy-two years old, died at the hands of an enemy in one tiny room over the tan of clotheslines in the rear of the tenement at 101 Norfolk street.

Though neighbors were packed in tiers above and around them, their blood was shed so secretly some time on Wednesday last, so the police fix the time, that it was not until Sunday that the hundred people in the tenement knew that for four days a quarter inch of pineboard had screened murder from their eyes.

They would not have been discovered then if it had not been that Aaron Futterman, the only son, came down to the Norfolk street tenement to pay a visit to his aged parents.

The son knocked at the door of his parents' two rooms. There was no answer. Rosie Harris, who lives on the same floor, poked her head out of the door and called:

"Maybe they is both sick. Not for four days have we seen them, and the milk, it has stood there before the door not taken in."

Aaron Futterman became alarmed. He went out on the street and found Policemen O'Neill and Cuddeberly. When they came back and could not open the door without forcing it, Cuddeberly crawled through the window of the adjoining apartment and over the fire escape until he could look through the window of the very small bedroom.

The policeman saw what all the tenement had lived with unknowingly for four days. Cuddeberly waved away to the station and wait there until the policeman should come and tell him something. Aaron Futterman stumbled down the stairs wailing.

Other policemen and detectives came from the station. The door was broken open and the police officials went into the room of squalid death.

The body of Isaac, garbed partially in his underclothes, sat on the edge of a couch bed, with the naked shoulders propped against the wall behind. His head was thrown back, so that his long white beard of a patriarch tilted rakishly toward the ceiling. His right eye was gone and the empty socket showed a wound that had penetrated to the brain; such a wound as might have been made by a butcher's steel, or some other dull-pointed, slender object pushed viciously upward through the eye and into the brain. There was another wound, which was plainly vicious mutilation, done after death had been caused and inspired by no possible motive except insane revenge.

Over opposite the place where the body of Isaac sat was a featherbed, with two great feather comforters such as the Russians use, piled high upon it. The police pulled back the thick top covering and found huddled there in the bed the body of Rebecca, in her nightclothes. The woman's right eye was gone. A wound had been made there smaller in every respect to the wound that had been the death of Isaac.

No fingerprints were found, and there was no sign of a struggle.

Later, when Harry Futterman, the grandson of Isaac and Rebecca, talked with the police, he said that his grandparents were comfortably well off, but that he knew Isaac had never kept much money in his rooms.

MISTAKE COSTS GIRL'S LIFE

She Drank Carbolic In Mistake For Medicine.

Chester, Pa., Jan. 8.—Drinking a quantity of carbolic acid by mistake for medicine, Miss Katharine Logue, eighteen years old, of Sixteenth and Walnut streets, died within half an hour in terrible agony.

She was found on the kitchen floor by her mother, who thought that her daughter had been seized with a fit. Three doctors made heroic efforts to save the girl's life.

Miss Logue had been ill for a week, and made the mistake when she went to the medicine chest in a darkened room.

Awaiting Lashes, Prisoner Fires Cell.
Centerville, Md., Jan. 8.—Lawrence Stinger, tried for wife beating, sentenced to receive ten lashes across his back, and believed to be demented, after he destroyed several walls in his cell, set fire to his bedding and clothing in the Centerville jail. The fire was burning merrily when the smoke attracted the attention of Mrs. Legg, wife of the sheriff and several officers, who extinguished the blaze.

But Thirty of 900 Accept Work.
St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 8.—Of the 900 homeless men who sought refuge from the cold at the police shelter here only thirty appeared in the railroad yards, where work at shoveling snow had been offered to all who would apply.

SAVED FROM FLAMES IN ZERO WEATHER

Eight Persons Carried Out in Nightclothes.

Easton, Pa., Jan. 8.—During a blinding snowstorm, with the thermometer registering zero, eight persons, partly overcome by smoke, were rescued from a burning building here.

The fire started in the furniture store of Feinberg & Brooks, where it did $15,000 damage, and spread to an adjoining apartment house conducted by Mrs. Ella Snyder.

The exits were cut off and the house rapidly filled with smoke. Mrs. Snyder aroused her two children, Claire, aged eight years, and Violet, aged ten years, and her maid, Miss Lillie Young, and gathered them about her in the front room on the second floor. The children were only half conscious and were carried down ladders by the firemen.

Mrs. Snyder then went to the third floor and aroused Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wheeler and their guests, John Wheeler and Miss Laura Wheeler, of Perth Amboy, N. J.

By this time Mrs. Snyder was almost suffocated and the firemen were obliged to carry the five persons from third-story windows. The rescued persons were attired only in their night clothes.

BULLDOG A DEADLY WEAPON

Court's Decision in an Assault and Battery Case.

Danville, Va., Jan. 8.—Justice of the Peace H. J. Hall, has decided that a bulldog is a deadly weapon.

Mrs. Cleo Wilson went to the home of Mrs. May Hensley. According to the testimony, Mrs. Hensley sallied forth, reinforced by a son bearing a club and a powerful bulldog. Mrs. Wilson and other witnesses testified that Mrs. Hensley seized her by the hair, the bulldog grabbed her by the leg and the boy struck her with the club.

She swore out a warrant charging Mrs. Hensley with assault with a deadly weapon, to wit—a bulldog, and Justice Hall held the defendant to the grand jury.

LA FOLLETTE AND BRYAN CONFER

They Meet in Washington and Talk Politics.

DEMOCRATS WERE WAITING

They Both Declared That Discussion Related Only to Direct Election of United States Senators.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Colonel William Jennings Bryan and Senator Robert M. LaFollette had a conference at the Union station upon their joint arrival in the city, the former from the south and the latter from the west.

The meeting between the three-time presidential candidate of the Democratic party and the Progressive Republican who is seeking to wrest the Republican nomination from President Taft, was said to be accidental.

No sooner was it known that the Progressive leaders of the two parties had come together than tongues began to wag and third party talk flew thick and fast about the hotel corridors. It was not wholly confined to members of the Democratic national committee, who were gathering for the meeting today. Republicans, too, showed a lively interest.

All day the Democratic committee-men had been seeking methods of dealing with the several perplexing questions scheduled to come up at the meeting, but nearly every possible solution advanced seemed to depend on the probable attitude of the Nebraska leader. Progress was slow because of the general desire to consult with Mr. Bryan, and his arrival was awaited with great impatience.

Many prominent Democratic leaders were at the station. After handshaking all around Mr. Bryan sighted Senator LaFollette, or to be exact, they seemed to sight each other at about the same time. They rushed towards each other and shook hands, and then lost no time in withdrawing a short distance from the crowd. They sat down on a bench and conversed with evident earnestness for several minutes. "What's being pulled off?" was the question the waiting Democrats seemed to be asking each other as they watched the two men. This interrogation in the vernacular of the street was not actually propounded, but that there was some consternation in the party was apparent.

When Mr. Bryan and the senator parted there was another show of good feeling. Mr. Bryan then explained tersely that Senator LaFollette and he had talked about the resolution pending in congress providing for the election of senators by popular vote. Senator LaFollette gave the same explanation by telephone, but in the minds of some there remained a little skepticism.

Colonel Bryan drove from the station to the home of Colter T. Blide, his closest friend in Washington. He declined to talk about any of the problems the national committee will have to solve. It was evident that he wanted to get his bearings before plunging into what promises to be a stirring gathering.

After removing travel stains, Colonel Bryan drove to the hotel apartment of Norman E. Mack, chairman of the national committee.

At the hotel Mr. Bryan was met by a large number of newspaper men. He was asked questions in every conceivable form, but he would not discuss candidates, contests, presidential primaries or any of the matters pending before the committee. He would not talk of the letter said to have been written by Woodrow Wilson, a few years ago, urging the party to rid itself of the Nebraska, but he was affable as ever as he edged away from the persistent group and slipped into the elevator which carried him to Mr. Mack's apartment.

PLAYED TROMBONE IN COLD

Musician's Lips Are Frozen to Mouth-piece of Instrument.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 8.—While he was playing a trombone in a German band which invaded this city and boldly blew tunes in the open streets with the thermometer about three degrees above zero, Otto Strausman suddenly threw up one arm and motioned to his companions to help him take the instrument from his lips.

When they did so they had to send Otto to a physician to have his lips mended. The cold metal had torn the flesh away.

THE GIRL from HIS TOWN

By MARIE VAN VORST
Illustrations by M. G. KETNER

(Copyright, 1910, by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind whom he some day hopes to find.

CHAPTER II.—Dan meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her.

CHAPTER III.—Back at Blairtown, when Dan was a boy, a girl with golden hair, in a white dress trimmed with blue sang a solo at a church. He had never forgotten her, although she never again appeared in Blairtown.

CHAPTER IV.—The Galoreys, Lily and Dan take a box at a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town who sang so sweetly. Going behind the scenes he introduces himself to her and she remembers him.

CHAPTER V.

At the Carlton.

There are certain natures to whom each appearance of evil, each form of delinquency is a fresh surprise. They are born simple, in the sweet sense of the word, and they go down to old age never of the world, although in a sense worldly. If Dan Blair's eyes were somewhat opened at twenty-two, he had yet the bloom on his soul. He was no fool, but his ideals stood up each on its pedestal and ready to appear one by one to him as the scenes of his life shifted and the different curtains rose. He had been trained in finance from his boyhood and he was a born financier. Money was his natural element; he could go far in

"She Knows How to Make Herself Conspicuous," Said the Duchess.

It. But woman! He was one of those manly creatures—a knight—to whom each woman is a sacred thing: a dove, a crystal-clear soul, made to cherish and to protect, made to be spoiled. And in Dan were all the qualities that go to make up the unselfish, tender, foolish, and often unhappy American husband. These were some of the other things he had inherited from his father. Blair, senior, had married his first love, and where as his boy had been trained to know money and its value, how to keep it and spend it, to save it and to make it, he had been taught nothing at all about woman. He had never been taught to distrust women, never been warned against them; he had been taught nothing but his father's memory of his mother, and the result was that he worshipped the sex and wondered at the mystery.

With Gordon Galorey and the others he had ridden, shot better than they, and had played, but with Lady Galorey and the Duchess of Breakwater he was nothing but a child. As far as his hostess was concerned, on several occasions she had put to him certain states of affairs, well, touchingly. Dan had been moved by the stories of sore need among the tenants, had been impressed by the necessity of reforms and rebuildings and on each occasion had given his hostess a check. She had asked him to say nothing about it to Gordon, and he had kept his silence. Dan liked Lady Galorey extremely: she was jolly, witty and friendly. She treated him as a member of the family and made no demands on him, save the ones mentioned.

In the time that he had come to know the Duchess of Breakwater she, on her part, had filled him full of other confidences. Into his young ears she poured the story of her disappointment, her disjointed life, from her worldly girlhood to her disillusion in marriage. She was beautiful when she talked and more lovely when she wept. Dan thought himself in love with the Duchess of Breakwater. His conversations with her had brought him to this conclusion. They had motored from Osdene Park together, and he had been extremely taken with the pleasure of it, and with the fact of their real companionship. Two or three times the words had been on his lips, which were fated not to be spoken then, however, and Dan reached the Gaiety still unfettered, his duchess by his side. And then the orchestra had begun to play "Mandala," the curtain had gone up, and Letty Lane had come out on the boards. But her apparition did not strike off his chains immediately, nor did he renounce his plan to tell the duchess the very next day that he loved her.

When with sparkling eyes Lady Galorey raved about "Mandala," Dan listened with eagerness. Everybody seemed to know all about Letty Lane, but he alone knew from what town she had come!

They went for supper at the Carlton after the theater.

"Letty," Lady Galorey said, "tells it herself how the impresario heard her sing in some country church—picked her up then and there and brought her over here, and they say she married him."

Dan Blair could have told them how she had sung in that little church that day. Dan was eating his caviare sandwich. "Her name then was Sally Towney," he murmured. How little he had guessed that she was singing herself right out of that church and into the London Gaiety Theater! Anyway, she had made him "sit up!" It was a far cry from Montana to the London Gaiety. And so she married the greasy Jew who had discovered her!

Dan glanced over at the Duchess of Breakwater. She was looking well, exquisitely high bred, and she impressed him. She leaned slightly over to him, laughing. He had hardly dared to meet her eyes that day, fearing that she might read his secret. She had told him that in her own right she was a countess—the Countess of Stainer. Titles didn't cut any ice with him. At any rate, she would be able to "buy back the old farm"—that is the way Dan put it. She had told him of the beautiful old Stainer Court, mortgaged and hung up with debts, as deep in ruins as the ivy was thick on the walls.

As Dan looked over at the duchess he saw the other people staring and looking about at a table near. It was spread a little to their left for four people, a great bouquet of orchids in the center.

"There," Galorey said, "there's Letty Lane." And the singer came in, followed by three men, the first of them the Prince Poniatowsky, indolent, bored, haughty, his eye-glass dangling. Miss Lane was dressed in black, a superb costume of faultless cut, and it enfolded her like a shadow; as a shadow might enfold a specter, for the dancer was as pale as the dead. She had neither painted nor rouged, she had evidently employed no coquetry to disguise her face; rather she seemed to be on the verge of a serious illness, and presented a striking contrast to the brilliant creature, who had shone before their eyes not an hour before. Her dress was a challenge to the more gay and delicate affairs the other women in the restaurant wore. The gown came severely up to her chin. Its high collar closed around with a pearl necklace; from her ears fell pearls, long, creamy and priceless. She wore a great feathered hat, which, drooping, almost hid her small, pale face and her golden hair. She drew off her gloves as she came in and her white, jeweled hands flashed. She looked infinitely tired and extremely bored. As soon as she took her seat at the table intended for her party, Poniatowsky poured her out a glass of champagne, which she drank off as though it were water.

"Gad," Lord Galorey said, "she is a stunner! What a figure, and what a head, and what daring to dress like that!"

"She knows how to make herself conspicuous," said the Duchess of Breakwater.

"She looks extremely ill," said Lady Galorey. "The pace she goes will do her up in a year or two."

Dan Blair had his back to her, and when they rose to leave he was the last to pass out. Letty Lane saw him, and a light broke over her pallid face. She nodded and smiled and shook her hand in a pretty little salute. If her face was pale, her lips were red, and her smile was like sunlight; and at her recognition a wave of friendly fellowship swept over the young man—a sort of loyal kinship to her which he hadn't felt for any other woman there, and which he could not have explained. In warm approval of the actress' distinction, he said softly to himself: "That's all right—she makes the rest of them look like thirty cents."

OLD AGE PENSIONS

Proposed By Congressman.

To give every man and woman over 60 years old a pension from the United States treasury, is the surprising proposal of a congressman.

What most old people need is help in keeping up strength and vigor.

Thousands of them know that the greatest help they can get is our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, called Vinol.

Mrs. Mary Ivey of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people you would be unable to supply the demand. I never took anything before that did me so much good as Vinol has done. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used in my life."

Vinol renews the energy and strength of old people because it enriches their thinned blood and improves their appetite and digestion, and is also so pleasant to take that they like to use it. We guarantee Vinol to give perfect satisfaction and pay back your money if it does not. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

Certain Results

Many a Gettysburg Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Gettysburg. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement.

Mrs. Mary Ohler, 185 Hanover St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I was troubled by weak and disordered kidneys for over a year. My back ached constantly and pains extended from my loins to my head. I had chills and dizzy spells and was bothered by irregular passages of the kidney secretion. Doan's Kidney Pills were so highly recommended that I finally procured a box at the People's Drug Store and commenced their use. A few doses brought relief and after continuing the use of this remedy for a short time, all symptoms of my trouble disappeared. Doan's Kidney Pills deserve my endorsement." (Statement given November 1, 1907.)

A WILLING CORROBORATION
On January 3, 1910, when Mrs. Ohler was interviewed, she said: "I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills again and confirm all I have previously said about them. This remedy should have a permanent place in every household."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Grandmothers Used Sage Tea

To Darken the Hair and Restore Natural Color.

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea" and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "Sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

This remedy is sold under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

If your hair is losing color or coming out, start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and see what a change it will make in a few days' time.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. People's Drug Store special agent for Gettysburg, Pa.
